...and over the last year or so President Trump has been dropping various hints abou ending all “income” taxation in America.

And just now he once again floated his vital thought experiment:

> How about just no tax, period?
> [APPLAUSE]
> You know, if the tariffs worked out like that, a thing like that could happen.
> [MORE APPLAUSE]
> Years ago, 1870 to 1913 we didn't have an income tax. We had— what we had is tariffs. Where foreign countries came in, and they stole our jobs and they stole o companies, they stole our product, they ripped us off.
> You know, they used to da a numbers— and then we went to tariff— a tariff syst — the tariff system made so much money. It was when we were the richest, from 1870 to 1913.
> Then we came in with the— brilliantly— we came in with the income tax, that w don't want others to pay, let's have our people pay.
> And then you had the Depression in 1928-1929— I call it 1929 that was a bad tim but you didn't have tariffs. The tariffs ended in 1913.
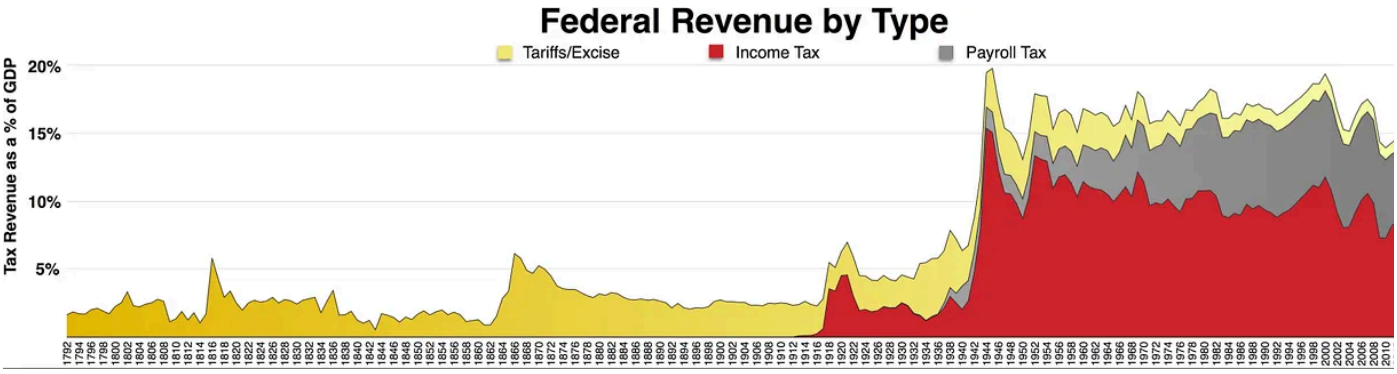
> But— uh— it was the richest our country ever was…

And President Trump of course is absolutely correct:



His recent promise of 'no taxes on tips' is an excellent start, but in order to truly fre
We the People he must end the IRS, and also end the Federal Reserve.

Speaking of the Fed and the Great Depression that President Trump was referencin it is this privately owned central planning politburo that has been directly responsi for all of the market crashes since it was scammed into existence along party lines, whereas the 16th Amendment was was passed through an act of congress when mo had gone home for Christmas holiday on December 23rd, 1913. No recess was calle and only three senators passed this unratified amendment by unanimous vote of jus 0.

And here is exactly how the Fed caused this Great Depression that President Trump was referring to:

It is no mere coincidence that both the 16th Amendment and The Federal Reserve A was foisted on We the People in 1913.

If President Trump does do away with both the IRS and the Fed, then he may very v go down as the greatest POTUS in America's history, his misguided and ruinous Operation Warp Speed notwithstanding.

They want you dead.

Do NOT comply.
